

Push the Button

Push the Button is a group exhibition of recent digital and media art produced by New Zealand artists.

July 16 – August 9
The Physics Room (L2/209 Tuam Street)

Artists have used video and computer technology increasingly over the past four decades – as technology continually changes there is a corresponding opportunity for innovation in the arts. Using digital video, flash animation, sound and interactive software, the artists in this show draw equally on reality TV, music videos and retro computer gaming technology alongside art/film history and contemporary cultural theory. This noisy and playfully interactive show features works by Toshi Endo, Terrence Handscomb, Sean Kerr, Michelle Lawrence and Amanda Newall. Definitely one of the more funky exhibitions on show in the Christchurch Arts Festival.
